Men's Healing

© 2014 DAN GORBUNOW, AMT

Ever heard a man complain about taking too good a care of himself? Spending too much time on self improvement or even satisfied with the amount of attention paid to self care? Chances are you won't, and there's lot's of reasons for why most men don't give health a top priority. In fact, a man is less likely to address any health concerns than to take care of a car problem - but why? Here's three reasons why men don't rank their health very high, and three ideas to improve care for the most important asset men have: the self.

(1) Mostly, men today are still caught in the cultural attitude or illusion that their bodies don't matter that much, nor for that matter, their mental health, nor emotional, nor spiritual, you get the idea. Somehow, men have gotten stuck with the idea that the self is something that is used to attain wanted things - work, money, pleasure, kicks, new experiences or well worn comforts - but not necessarily worth putting much effort into for it's own sake.

(2) Another tragic imprint from male culture: men are supposed to "tough it out" or "cowboy up". No Pain, No Gain, or maybe that's the excuse men tell themselves in order not to feel the full impact that lifestyle, work, and relationship habits have. Men often ignore "health alarms" and body alerts.

(3) "If it's not broke, don't fix it." The self is not a machine, it functions way past a crisis point- still, men are prone to wait until extremes of symptoms, pain, exhaustion and loss of function force a consideration of intervention - which is the worst time to start looking for help.

Men are starting to turn the tide on self care, and many men have incorporated self healing goals and strategies that support total well being. Here's three radical ideas to consider for improving men's health:

(1) Prevention is to men's health what investments are to financial security: take proactive steps to create surplus and build a "rainy day" or "happy retirement" supply of good health - poor health is far worse than being poor on cash. Proactive steps address imbalances and sets goals courageously. Act now, act decisively, and get over any resistance to total self worth now.

(2) The body belongs to the earth. This indigenous concept equates the body's ecology with the earth's well being, and vice-versa. Men can stand up for earth healing right now by taking better care of themselves. Making the body a sacred place of the earth is a grand healing act of service for all people. Consider the beauty and power of ancient or pristine places like Machu Piccu, Stonehenge, or the Boundary Waters, and give this same respect to the self.

(3) Spirit and energy are the roots of health. An old Taoist physics adage: "Energy precedes matter", meaning, big physical manifestations come from small energetic changes. Also, the spiritual health is the source of the physical. Men need spiritual "bread and wine", or communion with spirit through meditation, ritual, mentorship, wisdom studies and practices, and healthy father energy from any source available: conscious men and relatives, star gazing, prayer.

In summary, men need to value themselves more, can take more preventative actions and set healing goals to help adjust the total well being. Finally, men need more support to engage in spiritual and energetic practices to feed and balance the source of healing: the deep, fearless, wild, father-blessed, masculine self.

Greetings from the Chair

In previous Letters from the Chair, I have lamented the dismal portrayal of masculinity in advertising and popular culture. It's so bad, I can imagine that aliens in distant galaxies who might someday intercept our television signals would quickly believe that the human male is a thick-headed Neanderthal who is only concerned with excessive drinking, meaningless competition, and finding sex, whatever the cost. This is of course a wildly inaccurate, not to mention dispiriting portrayal of men, but it's a portrayal I think most men feel powerless to fight. It's as if men are willing to accept whatever gender role they are handed, whether it fits or not. Why define your own gender role when someone has already done it for you? I recently caught up with two friends who are redefining gender roles in ways that should give hope to anyone who has ever felt stereotyped.

Venus DeMars is a groundbreaking musician and risk-taking artist from Minneapolis. She is a transgender person who was born Steve, but realized early in life that a male gender role did not fit her. Beyond the difficulties of making a living as an artist and musician, Venus has had to endure indignities, rudeness, aggressiveness, and ignorance to a degree that most of us can't imagine, all because her gender role does not fit society's norm. Something as simple as using a public restroom can be fraught with complication and even danger. Being out in public at all means being a potential target for taunting and nasty comments. And yet through it all, Venus has maintained her composure, dignity, and even sense of humor. If ever someone had an incentive to accept a pre-defined, society-approved gender role, it's Venus. But she has, through sheer force of will and determination, defined her own gender role.

Neal Hagberg is a successful songwriter and an ordained Lutheran clergy. As the father of a teenage daughter, he is disturbed that the dominant religious traditions always portray God as masculine. Why is God never portrayed as feminine? And what does this do to young girls who are looking for their place in the spiritual world? Don't they start out at a disadvantage, feeling a little out of place, if not outright disenfranchised? Neal would love to see God referred to in the feminine, if only to balance out several millennia of male domination, or at the very least in a gender neutral way. He advocates this position in songs, speeches, and friendly conversation with anyone who is interested. Given the extensive history, you might think this would be an uphill battle, but when I saw him speak recently at a packed Catholic church, he received a standing ovation for his ideas.

Gender roles can be limiting, especially when they are not of our choosing. But if Venus can make her way in life as a proud transgender person despite all the obstacles, and if Neal can make progress suggesting an alternate gender role for God, isn't it possible that men who are unhappy with the gender role they've been given can find a better one?

Enjoy the Healing Power of Ritual at TCMC Monthly Men's Healing Ritual Facilitator: Dan Gorbunow, AMT

All of us are indigenous to the Earth (presumably!), so each of us has within us an indigenous spirit that seeks expression more than ever in the bustle of modern life. The healing ritual is a homecoming for our indigenous self that seeks to rekindle its special purpose and mission of service out of the ashes of society's consumptive, fiery nature. We lean in on our shadows and ancestors alike to help guide the way home to reconnection with our spirit, aided by drum, rattle, smoke, dance, and meditation. We show gratitude for the abundance of the earth by sharing a delicious feast with each other and to honor all life with a meditation for peace. Are you ready to come home and reclaim a bit more of your true self?

Join us each month near the full moon, and together we'll help mend the sacred masculine at TCMC. Open to all men, all ages. No fee, donations welcome.

The Men's Retirement Group which usually meets on the 3rd Sundays, will meet the 2nd Sunday of April, the 13th, at the usual time of 5:30 pm. This group is for men who are thinking of retirement, or who have retired. It is a an opportunity to share feelings with other men about the importance of work, and what happens when paid employment is no longer a part of a man's life.

Anger Management Program

Have you been told that your verbal and emotional expression of anger is out of control? Have you lost your job or spouse because you "blew up" one too many times? Have you been hit with a court order to take an Anger Management Class? Learn how to manage your feelings with the Twin Cities Anger Management Program. This is one of the best, and most affordable, programs in the area. It's ideal for men who desire to significantly improve their relationships at home and at work.

The focus of the twelve week anger management class is both education and support. Through class interaction, experiential exercises, lecture, and homework assignments, men will develop new ways to manage their feelings of anger. Following completion of the class, participants can join an ongoing support group to reinforce their new skills. These ongoing support groups will also be facilitated by the trained volunteer facilitators.

Length of Class: 12 consecutive weeks

Number of Participants: Limited to 12 men per class

Cost: $235 for TCMC Members ($250 for Non-Members)

Starting Dates: Classes are filled on a first come, first served basis. Currently, there are classes on Mondays, Thursdays, and Wednesdays.

Please call TCMC at 612-822-5892 to be placed on the waiting list. State name, address, telephone, preferred starting class. Or if you need further details, call our Anger Management coordinator, John Hesch, on the Anger Management phone 612-229-3102.
