The Value of Men's Support Groups:

An Interview with Ernie Gunderson (Part 1) © 2010 BY JOE SZURSZEWSKI

Erne Gunderson recently completed a clinical research paper for his Master's Degree in Social Work at St. Catherine University & the University of St. Thomas in St. Paul. The paper, titled, "A Men's Support Group: An Adjunct for Men in Psychotherapy," summarized the research he conducted by interviewing men who were regular attendees at a men's support group and received psychotherapy. A number of his research subjects were recruited from TCMC's support groups. Ernie was recently interviewed for Men Talk by TCMC Board Chair Joe Szurszewski.

Men Talk: Thank you so much for talking with us. First off, I'd like to know what are you doing now? Now that you have the Master's, how are you using it, are you practicing?

Ernie Gunderson: Actually, I don't have the Master's yet. I did the thesis a year early because I didn't get a suitable placement for my internship last year. So I wrote my thesis last year and this year I'm doing my internship, then I'll graduate in the spring. To answer your question, what I'm doing now is I'm counseling 3 days a week in my internship.

MT: Is that going well?

EG: It's going very well.

MT: And is it the sort thing you think you'll want to continue with after you officially have the Master's?

EG: Well, it certainly feels that way right now. It's still new and exciting, and I have a lot of energy for it, and every new client that comes in is really interesting to me. I wonder if I'll ever get to the point where it will get old, but it's not been that way yet. Whatever my client's story, I feel a bond with them and I really enjoy the work.

MT: What originally got you interested in this topic?

EG: I've been in the same men's support group since 1984. It's a closed group, we meet in private homes, and we take turns hosting.

MT: What was your goal in writing this paper?

EG: One goal was that I wanted to learn more about men's support groups. Now that I'm going into social work, the significance of the support group experience I've had over the years and its impact on my decision to go into social work, I just thought I wanted to learn more about support groups, and men's support groups in particular.

MT: Did you have any expectation as to what you'd find when you started this research?

EG: My research question was, "What would the impact be of regular attendance in a men's support group on one's experience in psychotherapy. Would it be beneficial? Would it actually have some kind of amplifying effect for the psychotherapy?" So that's what I was expecting to learn, and that's in fact what I did learn.

MT: Did you find some kind of synergistic effect between being in a support group and in being in therapy?

EG: Yes, that's what I found. I have lots of quotes from my interviewees in my paper about the synergistic effects.

MT: Can you give an example?

EG: One participant said that therapy gave him the tools for dealing with emotions, and gave him the ability to share with others, and also reinforced what he was doing for himself in group. Another participant said, "My support group is a place to talk about what I learned in therapy and to get reinforcement for it." Another fellow said, "The support group in some ways was allowing me to put flesh on the bones I had created in therapy. It allowed me to flesh out things and make them real, because it was done through relationships. So I was testing the benefits of my therapy in the support group through those relationships." I have other examples too, but that's really one of the best ones.

MT: You note in your paper that men typically have a hard time with social isolation. In the process of writing this paper, did you discover anything that might help men avoid this?

EG: Yes, it came out loud and clear that attending a support group is a springboard into being more active in a person's community and among friends. If you're isolated, you tend to isolate more. And being a part of a men's support group, gives one the confidence to be more active.

Library Corner

— JIM HEANEY, LIBRARIAN

We have a unique and extensive collection of books on men's and general topics which can be checked out by members of the Men's Center. Our periodicals include; Fathering Today, Men's Health, Men's Journal, Lavender, Transitions, and Voice Male.

Recent Additions: The Poetry Corner. The intent of the Poetry Corner is to provide a venue for anyone to share with others anything they have written. It is a place to share your thoughts & events gone by. The Men's Center hopes it will also be a place to share your feelings and lessons learned. Have you ever felt lonely, forgotten, excited, enlightened, or in love? If you felt strongly enough to write about your experience, pull out those poems you wrote and then stashed at the bottom of a dusty drawer. Bring these literary snapshots of your life and add them to the three ring binder on the round table in the library. Sign them or don't sign them. Just bring them in and share a piece of yourself with others.

Greetings from the Chair

As TCMC looks ahead to its 35th year serving the Twin Cities, we look back on a rewarding, yet challenging year. Financially, TCMC has struggled, and yet this past year has seen the introduction of new support groups, dozens of men trained in anger management, numerous visits to men in Minnesota's prisons, and thousands of men strengthened and comforted in our support groups.

It may seem like a paradox that TCMC's financial situation is precarious despite the fact that we continue to perform vital work. I don't believe the explanation has anything to do with the quality of our services. Rather, in economically hard times, demand for our services goes up while the ability to pay for these services goes down.

But perhaps I'm wrong. Maybe TCMC is failing to provide a service that is obviously needed by men in the Twin Cities. Or maybe you have a better idea about how we can offer an existing service. If you feel this way, or if you simply want to learn more about the Twin Cities Men's Center, I encourage you to attend TCMC's annual meeting on Saturday, January 8th, from 9 am to 11 am in the "big room" at TCMC. This is the one time a year when we come together to review the past year and look ahead to the next, and anyone interested in bettering himself as a man will find plenty of like-minded company.

Immediately following the annual meeting, TCMC will hold its annual support group facilitator training class. This class is recommended for all current facilitators, and is required for anyone wishing to become a facilitator. Lunch is provided by TCMC, and the class typically lasts 2 - 3 hours.

TCMC has survived as long as it has for one simple reason: men who benefitted from its services decided to make sure that other men would have the same opportunity to grow and get stronger. Attending the annual meeting is a great way of helping to do just that. Happy holidays to all friends of TCMC and your families!

BOARD CHAIR

MT: So if you're isolated, you tend to isolate more, but is the converse true, if you socialize, you tend to socialize more, so being in a support group leads to more socialization?

EG: Well, that's the impression I got from the feedback I was getting.

MT: Is there anything you discovered in doing this work that you'd like other social work and mental health professionals to learn?

EG: Yes, and that's the main finding of the paper, which is that if you're a man in psychotherapy, there's a great deal of benefit to also being in a men's support group. This is because of all of the feedback I got from my participants about how important it is to be able to practice what you learn in therapy in a men's support group. In therapy, it's a one-on-one situation, and it's not a peer, your therapist relationship is a business arrangement, it's not a peer relationship, so the boundaries are different. In a support group, you're relating to peers. So that's the real value of a support group. And therapists should know that too. In my literature review, I found that not many therapists are aware of support groups and the value and benefit of support groups. If anyone who reads the paper gets anything out of it, [I hope] it would be that if you're finding the need for psychotherapy, then you could also benefit from being in a support group.

MT: Can you talk a little about how doing this paper will inform your professional work going forward?

EG: Well, it already has, because the other two interns where I'm working are women. It turns out that at least half of clients want to see a male therapist, so I see as many clients as the other two interns combined. And a lot of them are men. The way my research is useful for me in my work now is that I think I relate to men's issues better, I definitely encourage men to seek out other men socially, and I always suggest men's support groups and I regularly recommend the Men's Center as a place to find a men's support group.

Part 2 of this interview will appear in the next issue of Men Talk. In the mean time, a copy of Ernie's paper is available in the TCMC office for anyone who'd like to read it.

Call 612-822-5892 if you are interested in this group because it's not a "drop-in" group.

Do you feel like you are the only one this has ever happened to? It's not true that men/boys cannot be raped or otherwise sexually abused. Many boys have survived abuse at the hands of parents (both Mothers and Fathers), relatives, siblings, neighbors, clergy and strangers. Early sexual experiences do not make a boy "lucky"; they can cause lasting feelings of being used and make adult intimacy difficult. You are not alone. You are not to blame. We provide a place where it is safe for survivors to talk. It is helpful to be heard by others who know what you are saying is true.

This group is a safe, non-confrontational, non-judgmental place to talk with other men about healthy sexual boundaries.

Oprah Show on Male Survivors of Sexual Abuse Oprah's Friday, November 12 show was about the impact of sexual abuse on boys/men – the second part of a 2-part series. 200 men that are survivors of sexual abuse were on the show; it was revealed 1 in 6 men have been sexually abused. Sex abuse is dark, and the high number of men impacted is horrifying. Men that are victims feel shame and shame is a toxic emotion and tricky to deal with. [Local] leaders on the ManKind Project-Minnesota weekend handle these men with grace. The November 5th show does a great job describing the impact and helps create understanding. Men's Studies Press 2010-2011 Catalogue lists 10 new books as well as 4 ongoing journals: "Thymos: Journal of Boyhood Studies", "The Journal of Men's Studies", "The International Journal of Men's Health" and "Fathering: A Journal of Theory, Research, and Practice about Men as Fathers". MSP, <<http://www.mensstudies.info/>>, P.O. Box 32, Harriman, TN 37748, 423-369-2375, <publisher@mensstudies.com>. - 2010-10-12

"Man Up" - cover article in September 27, 2010 Newsweek "The traditional Male is an endangered species. It's time to rethink masculinity." The article uses the culturally trendy phrase "man up" to mean something different. The 6-page article inside is titled "Men's Lib" which describes men finding work opportunities in professions not ordinarily hiring men: as nurses, customer service representatives, etc. as well as stay-at-home dads in the home. - Norm Petrik, 2010-11-08.

{Editor's note: At the Men's Center we always speak of "masculinities" (plural) so Newsweek, and the dominant culture are still 40 years behind...} "man up" means to suppress your feelings and "do your duty", right? What a throwback! It's just as remedial as the culturally trendy phrase "get over it" meaning "suppress your feelings: don't stop to do your grief work". - Andy}

The next ManKind Project-Minnesota New Warrior Training Adventure will be held April 29 - May 1, 2011 at Voyageur Environmental Center, Mound, MN west of Minneapolis. The cost is $595, with many payment plans and partial scholarships available. To learn more, attend an Open Circle event: Observe, Ask Questions (or Participate if you like) in a safe container with a group of men who are practicing authenticity and connection to feeling at Open Circle of Warriors events at the Men's Center every 2nd Wednesday, 7-9 p.m. Contact Andy Mickel with any questions 612-279-6416 or see: <<http://minnesota.mkp.org/>> for Open I-Group dates/times. - Andy Mickel, 2010-11-08.

Annual Facilitator Training January 8, 11 am

Our annual facilitator training will be held Saturday January 8th, after the Annual Meeting which begins at 9AM, thus facilitator training should begin at about 11 AM, with lunch provided by the Men's Center about noon.

Randy Genrich and Norm Petrik will again lead this annual training to update facilitators on expectations for facilitators, give needed help with how to lead groups and to share our experiences. I hope all you facilitators and men interested in learning to become a facilitator, will come. We very much appreciate your help for the Men's Center by facilitating.

Norm Petrik, Chair Program Comm.
